Leaving

"Leaving. We are leaving."
>Hiccup dragged his little basket of things towards Toothless. Toothless was on the ground, playing with another figure.
Astrid. Astrid had found out about Toothless ages ago, and had no hard feelings. She loved Toothless as much as Hiccup, and she wanted to come with Hiccup when he ran away. Today was that day. Both Dragon and girl turned towards the klinking of the basket. Astrid beamed. Toothless gave his signature gummy smile. Astrid asked Hiccup,

"Is it finally time to go?!" He nodded, and Astrid squealed. Both humans and the Night Fury hated this place. Hiccup because everyone hated him. Astrid beacause of Snotlout and her abusive parents. Toothless because of the constant raids, and the queen. Hiccup hoisted the basket onto Toothless and said,

"I left a note for my dad. Do you think he'll notice I'm gone?" Astrid smiled.

"Who cares? We are gonna be far, far away when he knows." Hiccup nodded. Toothless started to snort. Both of the non-dragons laughed and got onto the dragon. In a second, they were all up in the air and going away. Astrid gripped onto Hiccup and she fell asleep soon. Hiccup tried not to blush. But they became a speck on the horizon, and then they disappeared into the sunset.

>Stoick was looking for Hiccup. He wanted to congratulate his son for being able to get the title of Nightmare killer. When he arrived in Hiccup's room, he saw a piece of paper lying on the bed. He was confused for a moment. Where was his son. Stoick picked up the note and read it. What he read shocked him.

Dear Dad, It read.

I have run away, because I am not a dragon killer, like you said on the night of the raid. On that night, I really did shoot down a Night Fury. I did not kill it, but I let it free instead. He became my friend and I named him Toothless. Astrid found out and became my best friend. She befriended Toothless as well. She ran away with me as well. I ran beacuse you neglected me and everyone else bullied me. Namely Snotlout and the twins. I leave chieftanship to Fishlegs. If I die, I wish for my death to be frowned upon. If you don't disown me, I wish for me to be forgotten. Like Mom. I wish you the best. Say goodbye to Gobber for me. Odin watches over me.

Hiccup

Stoick wanted to cry. His son had disappeared. But soon he grew guilty. His son had run away because of him neglecting his son. He ran away with a soon to be great shield maiden, and a dragon because all of Berk had treated him like trash. Stoick did not disown his son. But he decided to make an announcement to the village tomorrow, so he could say his son was long gone and why, and so Fishlegs would know he would soon be chief. He hoped one day Hiccup would come back. One day.
